

Thomas Schwartz studied technical chemistry at the Vienna University of Technology, specializing in synthetic chemistry. He has been working for AGES since October 2017 and is a technical expert in the field of consumer goods, including food contact materials. At the European level, he works in the specialist groups of the European Commission, EFSA and the Council of Europe on food contact materials.